DYMO LABEL MAKER OVERVIEW

Overview:

Dymo's highly acclaimed range of electronic labelers come in Handheld and Desktop styles, some can be connected directly to a PC and all but one model can run on AA batteries. They are highly suited to situations where a tough durable label is required - one which is not prone to fading and discoloration due to UV light and/or high temperatures..... and they are perfect for situations where portability is essential.

The range of Dymo Electronic Label Makers is divided into 2 categories (i) Handheld and (ii) Desktop. Handheld models are better suited to being used while held in the hand. Desktop models are better suited to being used while on a table or bench or any other flat / solid surface. On the next 2 pages you will find more detailed information on the various models that fall within these 2 categories.

One feature that all of the Dymo Electronic Label makers share is that they use Dymo's D1 Label Cartridges. Following is an in-depth overview of the D1 tape system:

DYMO D1 LABEL CARTRIDGES:

Dymo Electronic Label Makers use Dymo D1 tape cartridges. These are available in widths ranging from 3/8" (6mm) right up to 1" (24mm). Each Dymo label maker model supports varying widths, so be sure to match your label width requirement with the right label maker model.

The D1 cartridge has 2 components inside. One is the label Tape and the other is a roll of Ink. When you press the 'print' button on your Dymo Label Maker, the Label Tape and Ink tape feed simultaneously through the cartridge and into the printhead. The printhead on the Dymo Label Maker simply transfers the Ink onto the Label Tape to create your printed output. It's a simple process.....

There are more than 40 different label color/material combinations, and because the D1 system is used in so many different Dymo machines you can have a Handheld labeler and a Desktop labeler and share cartridges between both machines. The cartridges are the same ones that Dymo have been selling for many years, so if you already have a Dymo labeler, there is a good chance that the same tapes will be usable in the new generation label machines.

One of the most important features of the Dymo D1 Tape System is the label materials that are used. Dymo have spent many years 'perfecting' the label materials and the permanent ink. D1 labels are resistant to water, oils, light solvents and solvents and they do not fade or discolor when exposed to UV light (sunlight) like many other label types.

Polyester/Plastic Tapes - the most common tape

Just right for most applications, these economical, self-adhesive tapes are easy-to-load and peel - available in a variety of background colors, widths and text colors.

Flexible Fabric/Nylon Tapes

Outstanding for heavily structured curved and/or rough surfaces - including pipes, ducts, tools and tag marking of cables - the durable adhesive layer ensures this flexible solution stays put.

Permanent Polyester Tapes

With outstanding resistance to scratches and water, this is the answer for items that need a permanent label - including personal belongings and warning notices on technical apparatus.

* in our pricing section, we have separated the Flexible Fabric/Nylon & Permanent Polyester tapes from the more common Polyester/Plastic Tapes in order to make them more identifiable.
